

Airline travel is already stressful enough without having to listen to your fellow passengers' one-sided conversations. It seems to me that this could be potentially dangerous situation. There is no reason why people can't stay off their cell phones for a couple of hours aboard a plane. If there is a need to make a emergency phone call or business call, most planes have a means to do that already. Please do not allow mindless chatter on airplanes!